INDICTMENT

The Grand Jury Charges:

INTRODUCTION

1. During all times relevant to the indictment, Edward Joseph Wedelstedt (Wedelstedt) was the owner of numerous stores and arcades which dealt in pornographic magazines, movies, and sex-related products such as vibrators and lubricants. Wedelstedt's stores and arcades are and have been located in the States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Nebraska, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, and Wyoming.

2. In 1995, Wedelstedt consolidated ownership of the large number of companies under which these stores operated into a single holding company, Goalie Entertainment Holdings, Inc. (GEH), a Colorado company. At all times relevant to the indictment, GEH and its subsidiaries, or its predecessors in interest, employed dozens of persons, at its corporate headquarters in Colorado, its purchasing and warehouse facilities in California, and elsewhere.

3. Among these numerous companies, GEH owned and operated two companies which are co-located in a single industrial building in Chatsworth, California: NLC, Inc., doing business as EPC (EPC), and Middle Management of America, Inc. doing business as M&M Sales (M&M). EPC handled the purchase and distribution of pornographic videos for the GEH adult bookstores. M&M handled the purchase and distribution of all other goods sold in the stores, including magazines and sex-related products.

4. The sexually-oriented stores owned and operated by Wedelstedt and GEH consisted of pornographic video arcades in the rear of the stores, and a retail sales room in the front of the store, dealing in pornographic magazines, sex-related products, and sexually explicit videos. The arcade services are also known as "video arcades" or "peep shows" (arcades), for the viewing of hard-core pornographic movies in small booths, known as "video arcade booths" or "peep show booths" (arcade booths).

5. In addition to providing arcade services in its own stores, GEH contracted to provide, for a percentage of the proceeds, arcade services in pornographic stores owned by other individuals and companies.

and other entities known and unknown to the Grand Jury, constituted an "enterprise" as defined by 18 U.S.C. §1961(4) (the "enterprise"), that is, a group of individuals and entities associated in fact, the activities of which affected interstate commerce, and which engaged in and whose leaders, members and associates operated and engaged in various unlawful activities in the Northern District of Texas and elsewhere. The enterprise constituted an ongoing organization whose members functioned as a continuing unit for a common purpose of achieving the objectives of the enterprise. This enterprise was engaged in, and its activities affected, interstate and foreign commerce.

PURPOSES OF THE ENTERPRISE

2. The purposes of the enterprise included:
 - A. the interstate transportation for the purpose of display, sale and distribution of obscene video tape and digital video disc (DVD) movies, as listed and charged in the Indictment as predicate offenses, the object of which was to obtain money for the members of the enterprise;

B. the distribution of the income, proceeds and property of the enterprise, directly and indirectly so as to hide the source and to benefit the defendants in the form of cash, cashier's checks, money orders, salaries, dividends, and interest payments; and

C. the acquisition of real estate for the purposes of distributing obscene, video films, and of profiting from the unlawful operation of the enterprise.

MANNER AND MEANS OF THE ENTERPRISE

3. Among the means and methods by which the Defendants and others known and unknown to the Grand Jury, conducted and participated in the conduct of affairs of the enterprise, were the following:

A. Wedelstedt established or purchased businesses known as NLC, Inc. doing business as EPC (EPC) and Middle Management of America, Inc., doing business as M&M Sales (M&M), co-located in the same facility in Chatsworth, California. EPC reviewed, selected, purchased and distributed movies in videotape and DVD formats for Wedelstedt or GEH owned arcades (including some operating under contract in stores owned by others). M&M performed a similar role for pornographic magazines and books, and sex-related products such as vibrators and lubricants.

B. As a means for selecting movies for his stores and arcades, Wedelstedt implemented a system for reviewing new movies. Each week, an employee or officer of EPC would purchase or otherwise obtain a copy of each new pornographic movie in which the company might be interested. The movies were divided among three to four reviewers. The reviewers were EPC employees who viewed each pornographic movie and recorded scores according to various criteria, specified on forms devised by Wedelstedt.

C. Periodically, an officer or employee of EPC sent a sample of the pornographic movies and score forms to Wedelstedt at the GEH office in Denver, so that he could review the work performed by the video reviewers.

D. An EPC officer or employee reviewed the movies' scores, and selected approximately 16 pornographic movies each week for display in GEH's arcades. EPC employees placed orders for sufficient copies of each movie selected for display in the arcades. Upon arrival at the EPC warehouse, these videotapes and DVDs were segregated from EPC's inventory of movies, and entered into its computerized inventory system.

E. Once each week, EPC employees created between 60 and 90 identical boxes, containing one copy each of the pornographic movies selected for display in GEH's arcades. An employee used the computerized inventory system to generate a "shipper," a paper packing slip identifying the contents of each box and its destination. The boxes were then shipped by United Parcel Service, a common carrier engaged in the carriage of goods in interstate commerce, to the offices of GEH's video technicians and arcade regional managers throughout the country.

F. Each of GEH's arcades consisted of numerous videotape or DVD players, attached to a closed-circuit television system broadcasting each player's output on a separate channel. The system's broadcast was distributed to numerous booths, containing a video screen, a mechanism for accepting payment, and a mechanism for selecting one of the channels for display on the video screen.

G. In most of GEH's arcades, the booths accepted coin-like tokens or currency, in the form of coins or bills. A typical customer was required to purchase a set amount of tokens from the store's cashier, before being admitted to the arcade area in the rear of the store. Once in the arcade, in addition to the tokens purchased at the front counter, the customer could either deposit cash into the currency acceptor in the arcade booth, or purchase more tokens from a bill changer, which was typically located in the arcade area of each store.

H. In certain GEH-operated arcades, the company had installed a "Cashless Video System" (CVS), which replaced the tokens with a plastic card with a magnetic stripe which could record a balance of credits. Credits could be used by inserting the card in the arcade booth, or added by inserting it along with currency in a device similar to a bill changer, typically located in the arcade area of each store.

I. Each token or CVS credit provided the customer with a small period of viewing time—approximately 45 seconds—on the system. The customer could extend the viewing of a movie by depositing additional tokens or currency, or debiting additional credits from the CVS card. A meter was installed in each video booth to record the number of tokens, currency, or credits deposited into it.

J. The operation of each of GEH's arcades was supervised by a video technician, whose responsibilities included emptying the video arcade booths and coin changers of currency and tokens, replacing pornographic movies, and maintaining the video equipment. Video technicians also oversaw janitorial staff who cleaned the arcade booths. The video technicians recorded the arcade booths' meters on a weekly "meter sheet" prepared for their supervisors, the regional arcade managers.

K. Video technicians reported to GEH's regional arcade managers. During all times relevant to the indictment, GEH divided its nationwide operations into regions. From 1997 to the present, this including five: the West Coast, based in Los Angeles; the Rocky Mountains, based in Denver, Colorado; the Midwest, based in Des Moines, Iowa; the South, based in Memphis, Tennessee; and Texas, based in Dallas.

L. Regional managers collected cash from the video technicians, and supervised their performance in maintaining the arcades. Regional managers' offices maintained the cash they received in either office safes or safe deposit boxes, after exchanging small bills for larger ones. The regional managers consolidated the information and cash received from the video technicians and recorded the totals on a weekly summary sheet, which reflected the week's revenue for all the arcades in their area. After preparing a weekly summary sheet, the regional arcade managers secured it with its currency, and destroyed or disposed of the video technicians' meter sheets, which identified the amount of revenue generated by each store.

M. Regional managers were responsible for periodically providing the cash they received to Wedelstedt, who traveled to the regional offices' locations every three to four months on a Lear Jet owned by GEH and its subsidiaries. On these trips, Wedelstedt frequently visited the pornographic bookstores and arcades in the region with the regional manager, and reviewed their operations along with the goods sold or displayed in them.

N. At least twice each year, Wedelstedt traveled to each regional manager's office and collected a large sum of cash which was consistently withdrawn by the regional managers from each week's revenues and segregated.

O. Wedelstedt maintained a safe in his homes, and several safe deposit boxes, some held under the names of nominee owners. He deposited large amounts of currency in these storage locations.

P. On a periodic basis, Wedelstedt brought into the GEH accounting department in Colorado a large sum of cash, along with instructions to deposit the money into GEH's bank account, and to credit the money as arcade revenue in GEH's computerized accounting system. Because the accounting system included a separate revenue center (an account number within the system) for each region, Wedelstedt provided a breakdown, on a percentage basis, purporting to allocate the large sum of cash amongst each of the stores' arcades.

Q. Wedelstedt and GEH's chief financial officer, routinely directed and oversaw financial transactions to obscure the nature of GEH's cash flow and secretly obtain cash from GEH. For example, in the spring of 2001, GEH's chief financial officer directed a GEH employee to cash four $25,000 checks made out to that employee from GEH, and provide the cash from those checks back to the chief financial officer.

R. Similarly, On a periodic basis beginning in 2001 and ending in 2002, Wedelstedt directed the chief financial officer to have a GEH employee cash checks made out to that employee from GEH in the amount of $5,000, and provide the cash from those checks back to the chief financial officer, who in turn, provided that cash to Wedelstedt.

S. Vivian Lee Schoug, was Wedelstedt's spouse, and she acted as the director, owner, operator, proprietor, employee and trustee for Wedelstedt and his business entities, accounts, and safe deposit boxes, and as such was responsible for the execution of contracts, resolutions, and agreements for and on behalf of the Defendant and other entities comprising the enterprise.

ROLES OF THE DEFENDANTS

4. The Defendants participated in the operation and management of the enterprise as follows.

A. Wedelstedt, was owner and operator, directly and indirectly, of all of the business entities listed in Paragraph 1, above, and as such he had the power and authority, and exercised the responsibility to:

- 2) oversee the system he had established to facilitate, select, order and pay for the interstate transportation or distribution of obscene movies, including video tape cassettes and DVD recordings;
- 3) recruit and cause to be recruited persons to serve as arcade regional managers, to collect cash from the video technicians;
- 4) collect, count, and supervise the collection and counting of the receipts of the enterprise;

5) determine, order and execute the financial transactions of the enterprise, including bank transactions, so as to impede and impair the ascertainment and collection of federal and state income tax;

6) hire and fire employees of the enterprise and determine the payment of wages and salaries;

7) purchase and sell, and negotiate the purchase, sale, transfer, disposition and condemnation of real property owned by and in the name of the individuals, corporations and other entities which comprised the enterprise and which property was used to conduct the activity and business of the enterprise and which property constituted and H

B. GEH existed as the parent corporation for a majority of the subsidiary companies that participated directly in the acquisition, distribution, receipt, management, and sale actions for the enterprise.

Conspiracy to Defraud the United States
(18 U.S.C. § 371 (26 U.S.C. § 7201))

1. The Internal Revenue Service (hereinafter IRS) is an agency of the United States Department of Treasury responsible for administering and enforcing the tax laws of the United States and collecting the taxes owed to the Treasury of the United States by its citizens.

2. Beginning in or about 1989, the exact date being unknown to the Grand Jury, and continuing to the present time, within the Northern District of Texas and elsewhere, the Defendants, Edward J. PURPOSE AND OBJECT OF THE CONSPIRACY

3. The object of the conspiracy was to defraud the United States of America by impeding, impairing, obstructing and defeating the lawful governmental functions of the IRS of the Treasury Department of the United States by concealing the amount and disposition of income, the true ownership, control, management, operation, and sources of funds used to acquire and expand the businesses of Wedelstedt as set out above. 4. Cash collected by regional managers, from the operation of video arcade machines located in stores owned and operated by GEH, was periodically provided to Wedelstedt who traveled to the regional offices every three to four months. 5. The cash that Wedelstedt received from the regional managers, that was not infused back into GEH, was never accounted for in GEH's books and records and was ultimately not accounted for on Wedelstedt's personal or GEH's corporate tax returns.

6. Wedelstedt, with the assistance of Schoug, and others, both known and unknown to the grand jury, attempted to conceal Wedelstedt's interest in the unreported cash derived from the operation of the arcade machines by acting as nominees in the context of corporations, enterprises, safety deposit boxes and tax returns.

OVERT ACTS

In furtherance of the conspiracy, in the Northern District of Texas and elsewhere, one or more co-conspirators committed at least one of the following overt acts, among others:

7. On or about December 29, 1999, a person known to the Grand Jury gave Wedelstedt who was on a business trip to Dallas, Texas, many envelopes full of cash that had been stored in a safe located at the Dallas Regional Office on Freewood Drive, Dallas, Texas.
